2 Post-doctoral Fellowships
The University of British Columbia, Counselling Services

The University of British Columbia, Counselling Services, invites applications for two 12-month post-doctoral fellowships in professional psychology. Fellows will receive advanced clinical training and supervision with a focus on brief therapy and crisis intervention in a multifaceted university counselling centre. Fellows work with a diverse student population across a broad range of mental health and wellness concerns. Opportunities to work with student athletes is available for applicants with training in sport psychology.

The fellowships are one-year, full-time, and begin the third week in August. The fellowships consist of a minimum of 1800 hours of supervised work experience. The work week is Monday through Friday, 40 hours in total. For further information, please visit our website at:

Training experience: will concentrate on (1) developing advanced clinical and case management skills; (2) collaborating as part of a multidisciplinary team with various mental health professionals when responding to challenging acute cases; (3) developing expertise in responding to the challenges facing professionals in university mental health services; and (4) developing skill in program evaluation and development.

Responsibilities: conduct initial & emergency appointments; provide individual and group counselling within a brief model; provide emergency/crisis intervention; supervise master’s level counsellors; provide consultation with faculty, staff, and parents regarding student concerns; facilitate workshops and provide outreach and community development activities.

Supervision & training opportunities: each fellow participates in staff meetings, case management, and group supervision. Fellows receive two hours per week of individual face-to-face supervision provided by registered psychologists.

Multicultural competence: UBC is a very large institution that draws from the world’s finest students from more than 120 countries. Working in the counselling centre requires ability to conceptualize a broad range of clinical issues from a multicultural perspective. Diversity is supported and celebrated by all staff.

Stipend & benefits: the stipend for each fellowship is $40,000.00 CAD per annum. This includes 4 weeks vacation, 5 days and $500.00 for professional development activities, paid stat holidays, sick leave benefits, health benefits, and library privileges.

Qualifications: applicants for these positions must have successfully completed a predoctoral internship in clinical or counselling psychology. Previous training in a counseling centre setting is highly desired. Application deadline is November 1st. Positions are open until filled.

Application requirements: to apply, the following materials must be received:

- Cover letter stating your specific interests in our program, goals for post-doctoral training, summary of theoretical orientation and counselling approach
- Current CV
- Three letters of reference, at least one from training coordinator of predoctoral internship and one from clinical supervisor
- Official transcripts
- Mock video (not an actual client) of an initial counselling session (max 30 minutes)
